Coronavirus and your wellbeing

You might be worried about coronavirus (COVID-19) and how it could affect your life. This may include having to stay at home and avoid other people.

This might feel difficult or stressful. But there are lots of things you can try that could help your wellbeing.

This information is to help you cope if:

- you're feeling anxious or worried about coronavirus
- you're staying at home and avoiding public places, following Government advice that we should stay at home as much as possible
- you are self-isolating because you, or someone you live with, has symptoms of coronavirus. Self-isolating means you don't leave your home for any reason, other than for exercise once per day.

And this information covers:

- Staying at home or indoors

Family Support

- Take care of your mental health and wellbeing
- Checklist for staying at home

You might also find these links helpful:

- The NHS website has guidance in English about coronavirus and staying at home.
- The Welsh Government website has guidance in English about coronavirus and staying at home, and guidance in Welsh about coronavirus and staying at home.
- The NHS website has guidance in English about what to do if you, or someone you live with, has symptoms of coronavirus and you need to self-isolate. This advice is stricter than the standard guidance about staying at home.

NHS England and the Welsh government are contacting people who they have identified as being at higher risk of severe illness from coronavirus. This is because of certain pre-existing physical health conditions.

If this affects you or someone you know, there is specific guidance that you should follow, and extra support available to help you:

- The UK Government website has specific guidance to help protect yourself from coronavirus.

Family Support

- The Welsh Government website has specific guidance in English to help protect yourself, and specific guidance in Welsh to help protect yourself.
- If you live in England, you can register for extra support on the UK Government website, or somebody else can register on your behalf
